The his spet upon the coast on his march northword. It was written in hieroglyphics, within a square border. The second was by an Assyriam king, either semacherito rannancer, who boastfully sculptured his record by the side of that of the great Egyptian conqueror. This is in the arrow-headed characters, and a cast of it is in the British Museum. In a later century, a Bunan General recorded his march through the country by an inscription cut on a lower part of the same rock, and later still an Arab General did the same. Each in his turn respected the previous inscriptions, and was contented to place his own beside them. But mitoritunately, two or three years ago, a French army was in possession of the same coast, and that General, with a bad taste which we should hardly have exyected from a sation professing the same rocks and the same coast, and that so respected the profess of ardly have expected from a nation professing the so civilized, has recorded the glories of the French armies under Nanoleon III. within the French arm'es under Nanoleon III. within the square border which once held the Expinant inscription. We have lately been shown a hetograph of the rock in its present state, to the fact as above stated, which we aight otherwise have doubted, namely: that he Expinant inscription has been thus decount of Heradous that the Expitians arched through that country, and which countried the account in the Bible that the Israel as under the Judges had not vet reached the coast of the Mediterrancen, and explained he wars of Semeon against the Phillitines by lowing that the latter had been already cuted by the Expitions. vates. The Madison Corrier of the 1.th gives the following idea of her troubles:

Five young men and two boys crossed in a skill from Madison to the Kentneky side of the river, late yesterday afternoon, with malice toward Delia Webster, on account of certain blackberry operations. Shortly after landing they came across a man in a two-horse warpon filled with stands for berries, which they were handing from the Webster place to the depot for early men. The guerrillas waited until the feam came near the river, when the leader of the gang approached and assanated the driver, who is a hand in the employ of Miss Webster. He attempted to defend himself, but the whole rowd pitched into him, sing their ist an atomes, knocked him down, kleked him, and teat him about the head and face in a most brutal manner. The young men then proceeded deliberately to unblich the boyess from the vehicle and run them off. They also threw the blackberry stands, with wagon and all, into the river. The object of the recomol same having been accomplished, in part at least, the party returned to this side of the river, and soome of them inmediately took passage on the mailboat tor Lonisville.

Quite a crowd witnessed the proceedings from this side of the river. Miss Webster berselt was in Madison at the time, and was highly indignant on learning of the affair, but of course could not do anything. A man in her employ who was found on this sile, it is eaid, was a so set upon by a parcel of boys and compelled to take refuge in a building on like street.

I suppose there are two thousand miners at work getting gold in Geockard and Lousia counties. They average about two pennyweights a day to eschman. I have heard that they are working in Buckingham, Culpepiper, Finranna, and other counties. The gold mines have never been fully developed; the quartz veins are large and very rich and would pay well, but not a single quartz mill is working in the gold districts. In a few places some are working with stone and iron mortars, and in that rude way do very well. There will be a brightness down upon the gold mines of Virginia before fall.
